About New District Brewing Company:

New District Brewing Company is a family and friend owned business built from the ground up right here in Northern Virginia. The name New District is derived from when the federal government gave back Arlington and Alexandria in 1846, after previously declaring the land a part of the seat of the federal government in 1801. This area became unofficially named “The New District”. The last brewery in Arlington County was aptly named the Arlington Brewing Company and was located as the base of the Key Bridge, hence our logo!
